Short Story

This little "mystery-ette" was written by Kitty Cabell, a member of the Creative English Class of the Appomattox high school:

HERITAGE

His rose slowly from the bed and moved stealthily lest he be detected—a shadowy, rather grotesque figure against the bright background that was the glare of the street lamps.

Moving cautiously, he groped for his wife's dressing table, curled his fingers around the knob and pulled out the drawer. Several minutes of furtle searching went by before the desired object could be found.

He drew it out, flashing it boldly, rather defiantly. No one would ever know, he thought, glancing at his wife who was sleeping in the other twin bed. He turned, pulled on his coat, opened the closet door and drew out a mask. With this on, he tiptoed to Marie's bed. She was sleeping peacefully, innocently unaware of the danger that lurked in his hand. He felt no guilt, even as he looked down at her fair face on the pillow.. visible in the light of the street lamp. Then he drew the ugly thing up and held it one fleeting moment, gazing at it intently.

Resolutely he laid it under the pillow.. the antique brooch that Aunt Len had left to Marie (it was worth a fortune), hoping that no one would molest it until he could visit a pawn-shop tomorrow! He slipped out to celebrate the event with a little session of poker with the boys! It was Hallowe'en.

—Kitty Cabell.

Marble Table Tops

From Eisenach, England come records of marble stone table tops in 1588, although it was not until the early part of the 18th century that marble appeared as an important factor in the building of England. Its use in Italy most probably predates this, since the natural resources there and the architectural character of the furniture would both encourage the use of marble.

Giants' Causeway

There is no natural phenomenon anywhere to compare to the Giants' Causeway, on the northern coast of Ireland, with its piled masses of hexagonal rocks, a gigantic and fantastic breakwater that is one of the wonders of the world. No highway by the sea surpasses in grandeur the magnificent coast road which leads to it.

Canada's Status

Canada, like Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, is a self-governing part of the British empire or Commonwealth of Nations. She pays no taxes to the mother country, and is not bound to render her military help in time of war. Her governor-general is appointed by the king on the advice of the Canadian ministry, and has a theoretical veto power over legislation. The supreme judicial authority of the British empire is the judicial committee of the Privy council in London, before which appeals may be brought (in the form of a petition to the crown) from consular courts and courts of colonial originality and from the courts of India and every British dominion. India has a limited amount of self-government with two native legislative chambers. Other portions of the empire consist of crown colonies and protectorates.

Consecration

Consecration is not wrapping one's self in a holy web in the sanctuary; it is going into the world and using every power for God's glory.
—Henry Ward Beecher.

What About Mu?

The mythical continent of Mu is pictured as having sunk in the Pacific just as the equally mythical land of Atlantis in the Atlantic. A map of Mu which has been exhibited is a contour map of the bottom of the Pacific ocean based on soundings. Hindu tablets discovered in India are alleged to show that the continent of Mu sank about 10,000 B. C., destroying 64,000,000 persons, including a ruling race of whites. None of these, nor their works, were saved, unless we except the carved rocks on some of the South Sea islands, the peaks of which were not submerged. Lemuria is another hypothetical continent in the Indian ocean, including Madagascar and other islands and home of the genus of mammals known as lemurs.

Value of Refrigeration

In scientific research work in the preservation of cultures, in working with toxins and anti-toxins, electric refrigeration is invaluable. Regular electric refrigerators work admirably in many phases of research work, because of their close temperature operation within the limited temperature range required.

FATHER DARLEAF'S COLUMN

by c. h. r.

Quite the best yarn of the week was the account of Mose, the darkey who was in the pen awaiting the hallows. As the day of the hanging approached, Mose got powerful upset. Someone told him his only chance was for the governor to pardon him. So.... Mose sat up all night long writing his plea to the governor for his life. The next day the governor got the following letter: "Does you realize, Mr. Governor, dat they is fixin' ter hang me Friday, and here it is Tuesday?"

Four Evergreen business men, each one of them a farmer, one a chicken raiser and farmer, one a railroad section foreman, and one a mechanic have pooled resources and have had constructed a large dam, some 250 feet long and perhaps 20 feet high that will form a lake covering several acres of land. This lake will be stocked with fish and frogs, and in time doubtless will attract ducks, and other waterfowl. It so happens that each of the owners of this lake has a name beginning with the letter "J"— namely, J. M. Clapp, on whose farm the lake is situated, together with J. A. Young, J. R. Hamilton, and Jim Inge. Quite appropriately they have named their lake the "4 J's." This is a private lake, constructed for the pleasure and recreation of the families immediately interested, and it is understood there will be no boating or fishing for the general public, for hire or otherwise.

Thanks to W. W. Farrar for the above news paragraph.

And here is another paragraph from Mr. Farrar's interesting pen:

The writer has for a long time looked with derision on those people, mostly feminine, who insist on looking under beds, in closets and in imaginary hiding places before extinguishing the light; then and hereby hangs a tale. During one of the recent cold nights he rather hastily got into bed, but soon found that all was not right. Somehow, the bed did not feel right, and when he received a sharp jab in the arm, he got out of bed rather quicker than he got in. What kind of bedfellow do you suppose he found? On making a light, ...it was a big wasp, evidently seeking a winter haven, drove the Ladies Adult class from their room at the Evergreen Baptist church last Sunday!

Many Legislative Problems Ahead In The Old Dominion

(By VPA)

Richmond, Oct. 25.- Members of the Virginia General Assembly who will be elected at the polls November 7th will have a heavy legislative program ready when they convene in January for the regular biennial session. Probably holding chief interest at this time is the Educational program, which apparently will revolve about the question of available funds. The full "three-point" program for the schools is estimated to require about $5,100,000 more per year than the present appropriation. Governor Price has stated he would build his budget around the schools. He has also said there will be no tax increases, there will be a balanced budget. The State Department of Education's three-point program provides a minimum $720 salary per teacher unit, free textbooks and a "sound" retirement plan for teachers.

Abolition of the fee system as a basis of compensation for sheriffs and certain city sergeants is another major question scheduled to come before the 1940 legislature. The fee question, tied up with a long-debated program of jail and penal reform which has been under study for the past few years, may be held for more minute examination by the time the lawmakers convene as a result of a stat-wide audit of criminal costs which is being pushed toward completion by state auditor L. McCarthy Downs at the request of the Governor.

There are many other subjects sure to demand attention of the assemblymen. The state hospital board is anxious to see additional funds made available to permit the fireproofing of numerous old buildings at the institutions for mental patients, where some of the present structures have been labeled "fire traps." After a long study of the highway systems, a special commission has recommended the consolidation of the primary and secondary systems into one system in order to simplify construction and administration, and also the creation of a discretionary fund for allocation where needed without regard to construction districts. The commission also has revived a controversial issue of 1938 by endorsing by a one vote margin a proposal to prohibit road fund diversion by an amendment to the state constitution. Another study group has submitted a plan for levying the foundation for a merit system for state employees and a bill carrying this proposal is expected to be introduced.

Anticipating the question of where to get the money to finance the three-point school program, the Virginia Education Association, engaged a university economist to study the Virginia tax system with a view of finding new sources of revenue. The result was a report that the Old Dominion could boost its present tax revenues by $8,000,000 a year and still be below the "average" for the South. The talk of taxes and the fact that state agencies and institutions asked the Governor and his advisory committee on the budget for about $20,000,000 more than will be available for appropriation gave rise to counter moves by other groups, notably the Virginia State Chamber of Commerce to see Virginia continue without tax increases. Governor Price spiked most of the speculation when he announced a balanced budget was the 1940-42 goal. But the question still persists, "where is the money coming from?"

Life Story of Thos. S. Bocock, Famous Appomattox Citizen

By N. R. FEATHERSTON

An open invitation has been extended to the public to write on the political life of the late Thomas S. Bocock. While I shall make a feeble attempt to write on that subject, I shall also touch on his social life, as any write-up of his political life would be incomplete without the social side.

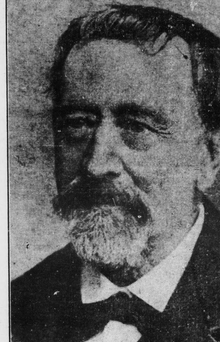
As the wheels of time roll on, each day bringing into the world souls great and small, as bright a star as decked the sky peeped down into old Buckingham County, Virginia, on the 15th day of May, 1815, and welcomed into this world the spirit of Thomas Salem Bocock, and from that time on, that bright star of intellect and high character was his guide, and never did that star have to dim its light on account of its subject failing to measure up to the highest standard. That star led him through his young days on into old Hampden- Sydney College, entering there in 1837, and graduating in 1838 with an A. B. degree and the highest honors of his class. (He was able to graduate in one year of having studied under his older brother, Col. Willis P. Bocock, who was a graduate of Hampden- Sydney.)

From the close of his school days he was very active in politics and the practice of law. If he possessed political ambitions, it was not necessary for him to make that fact known, for, being a young man of such brilliant mind, gigantic intellect, his powers as a debater, his oratorical powers, his unvarying courtesy, pleasing personality were all so naturally outstanding that his people were always ready to press him forward to any position of honor in their power to bestow upon him, and the political historian who fails to place the name of Thomas S. Bocock among the brightest stars of fame to shine while roll the wheels of time, leaves that history incomplete.

In 1842, when a young man, he was sent to the Legislature from Buckingham County, and when the County of Appomattox was formed in 1845, he was made the first Commonwealth Attorney. The people soon realized that the mantle of two intellectual giants, there was a tie, and for the unprecendented time of eight weeks they continued to tie on each ballot. Then for the good of the country, they each withdrew from the race and Mr. William Pennington, of New Jersey was elected.

Mr. Bocock was the leader of his party in Congress as well as leader of Congress, therefore, he was chosen by Congress to deliver an eulogy on Washington at the unveiling of the Houdon Statue. The speech he delivered on that occasion was a masterpiece in every respect.

By this time he had so favorably impressed upon the people of the United States his geniality, his high sense of duty to his people, his courtesy at all times, his consideration of the rights of others, his firmness in his convictions as to a principle, his brilliantical gifts, his powers in debate, showed in marked degree that he seems to be the chief interest at this time is the Educational program, which apparently will revolve about the question of available funds. The full "three-point" program for the schools is estimated to require about $5,100,000 more per year than the present appropriation. Governor Price has stated he would build his budget around the schools. He has also said there will be no tax increases, there will be a balanced budget. The State Department of Education's three-point program provides a minimum $720 salary per teacher unit, free textbooks and a "sound" retirement plan for teachers.



Attorney for the Commonwealth of a county did not fit the statue of Tom Bocock, and they very wisely elected him to Congress of the United States for fourteen consecutive years. During that time he made such a favorable impression on his, the Democratic party, that they placed his name in nomination for Speaker of the House, and the Republicans nominated against him Hon. John Sherman, of Ohio. On the first ballot between these Appomattox Grade Student Cooperative Association held its first meeting on October 13. The officers for 1939-40 were installed. They are:

Maurine O'Brien, president; Elizabeth Caldwell, vice president; Fanny Mae Cralle, secretary; Nancy Pat Cheatham, treasurer; Walton Jamerson, reporter

Miss Williams, sponsor.
